KAI MEDICAL ANNOUNCES PARTNERSHIP WITH FICOSA

HONOLULU, HAWAII, September 1, 2011 – Kai Medical, an award-winning developer of radar-based non-contact vital signs measurement and monitoring products, has partnered with Fico Mirrors, S.A. (“Ficosa”), a multinational corporation devoted to research, development, design, manufacturing and commercialization of automotive components and technologies for the automobile industry. The two companies plan to work together to develop a sensor that detects driver’s subject state, including driver fatigue.

“We’re excited to have partnered with Ficosa. This relationship attests to our continued focus on developing products that use our radar-based respiratory technology in novel and exciting applications that benefit end users,” said Bob Nakata, CEO and President of Kai Medical. “Fatigue plays a role in up to 20% of automobile accidents, and we hope that our partnership with Ficosa in developing a sensor to detect driver’s subject state can decrease or eliminate fatigue related accidents.”

The companies are currently undergoing research and development for the sensor which has drawn the attention of worldwide automobile manufacturers.

About Kai Medical, Inc.

Headquartered in Honolulu, Hawaii, Kai Medical develops medical devices designed to measure and monitor vital signs via radar, with no contact, and from a distance. Kai Medical’s latest two products have received the CE mark and are available for sale in Europe and other countries that recognize the CE mark. The first new product, the Kai Spot 2.1, is used to measure a patient’s point-in-time respiratory rate. The second new product, the Kai Continuous 1.0, is intended for continuous monitoring and measurement of respiratory rate and history. For more information, see www.kaimedical.com.
